

Sharecare wins 22 Digital Health Awards in Spring 2024 competition

June 14, 2024

Company recognized for its flagship well-being and health navigation platform, as well as clinically validated programs, digital therapeutics, and patient education content

ATLANTA, June 14, 2024 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Sharecare (Nasdaq: SHCR), the digital health company that helps people manage all their health in one place, today announced it has won 22 Digital Health Awards in the Health Information Resource Center's Spring 2024 competition. Now in its 26th year, the semiannual Digital Health Awards honor the best online and virtual health resources for both consumers and professionals.

"At Sharecare, we are driven by our commitment to help every individual take control of their personal health and well-being and navigate all the benefits available to them, no matter where they are in their personal journeys," said Dawn Whaley, president and chief marketing officer at Sharecare. "As we take a moment to celebrate our latest Digital Health Awards, I'm grateful to our Sharecare team for their tireless work to develop and deliver our innovative digital health tools, programs, and interventions on behalf of the country's most respected organizations – from large employers, health plans, and government organizations to health systems and life sciences companies."

Recognized for its ability to empower people at every point of their health journey through trusted information, innovative programs, and clinically validated solutions, Sharecare earned Gold in four categories. Additionally, Sharecare's flagship platform for large employers and health plans received a Silver award for disease management and population health management, while more than 15 additional honors were bestowed for the company's content initiatives and proprietary mobile apps, including Sharecare's digital therapeutics for tobacco cessation and anxiety.
